

ABOVE: A disappearing coast gun concealed within a concreted pit and covered with an iron shield. The gun is down, for loading.

BELOW: The disappearing gun 'up' for firing. This mode of mounting rapidly supplanted the casemate since it did not present the ship with a permanent target.